1961 ORIOLE

HARTFORD HIGH SCHOOL
Hartford, Wisconsin

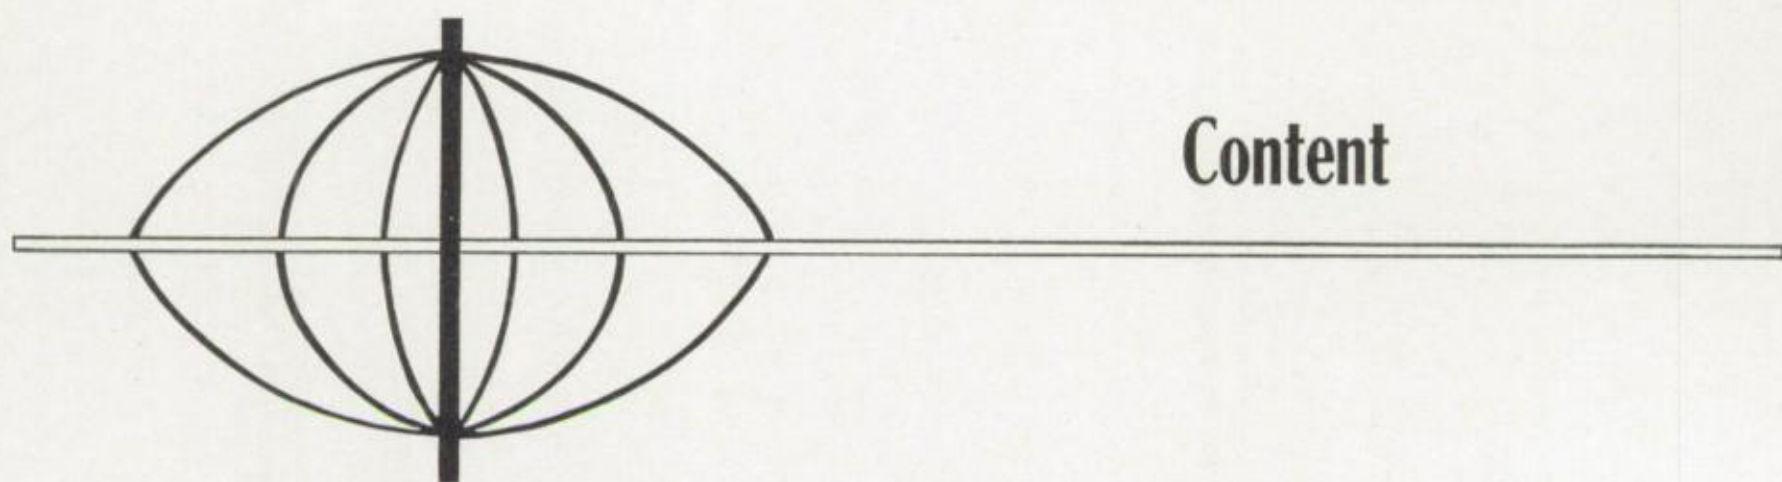

It's a small world, yet not so small. For our world is not made of brick and mortar and walls...our world knows no boundaries. Ours is a world of ideas and of people. It is a world created by the impact of our classes, our activities, competitive sports, and the faculty. These forces form a world as real as any we have known.

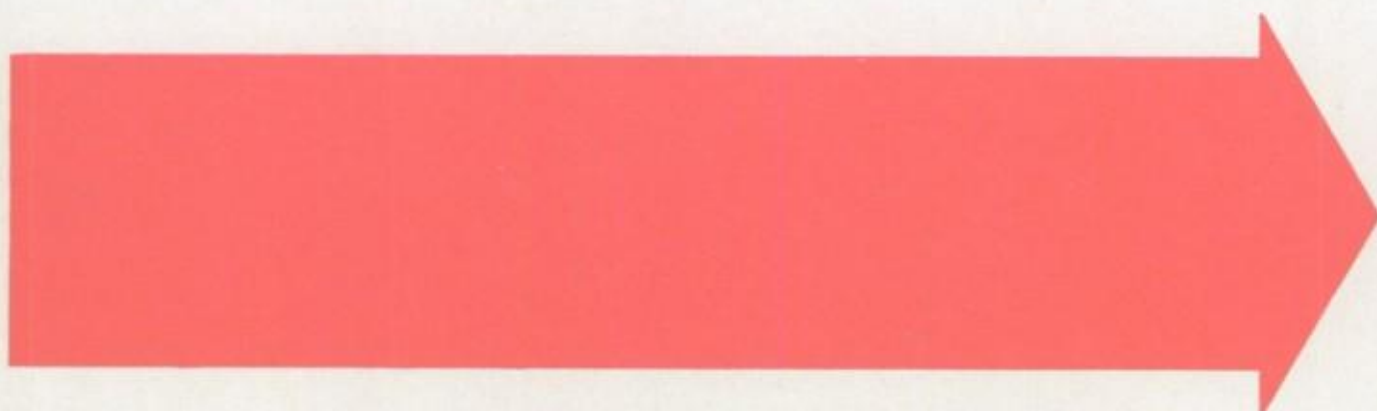

We realize this impact more fully this year because what we see has changed. Yet, let us remember that our school is known to us not by what is seen, but by what is felt. The school, the idea, the impact will be retained by one indestructable power, our memories.

Board of Education

Ordinarily not seen but constantly influencing every efficient educational institution are many individuals, not the least of whom are its school board members. The last few years have seen these board members involved with more and more work as plans for a new school were first examined and later carefully worked over to make sure that the taxpayers were to get their money's worth. Finally their work included seeing that the building ordered and to be paid for would be delivered.

The increase in the enrollment is a constant source of new concern as is the every day legislative action necessary on the part of these representatives of the school community.

Mr. Matthews, chairman of the school board, opens the dedication program...

Interested citizens of the Hartford community intently view the ceremonies on stage...

Administration

Mr. Boll looks over his busy schedule for the weeks ahead...

Bridging the gap between the old school and the new required a great many decisions, adjustments, and adaptations to be made by Mr. Boll, Principal of Hartford High School.

In spite of delays in construction of the new building, September saw Mr. Boll installed in his new office, and in turn, installing the students and familiarizing them with the new facilities and schedules.

The administration of a great new plant such as this presents a multitude of challenges and problems. Most of all there is the constant struggle to keep the basic purpose of the school in the foreground. All of these things, many undreamed of by the student body and community, confront Mr. Boll as administrator of this building.

Assisting Mr. Boll this year is our new Vice-Principal, Mr. Cartwright. Mr. Cartwright has taken charge of the Student Council, attendance, bus transportation, and many of the problems arising during a school day. His services are especially appreciated when Mr. Boll is keeping a business appointment.

He has contributed new ideas, necessary rules, as well as a new personality to the administration of H.H.S.; and most important of all, has helped to lighten the load on the shoulders of Mr. Boll, his office staff, and his guidance staff.

Mr. Cartwright examines some pertinent educational material...

Guidance

THE GUIDANCE DEPARTMENT

The Guidance Department is the portion of the school which is designed mainly to guide the student into his most profitable course. It is a very important function of any school, for it provides help in solving any problems which might arise. A new high school, such as the one we are presently in, can appear as a cold, impersonal institution. The Guidance Department, however, is at least one part of the school that tends to promote the warm personal touch that is so important for creating a congenial atmosphere.

Together Mr. Hammond and Mr. Aliota tackle a problem...

Office Staff

Better check that once more, Miss Wiedmeyer, before you turn the handle...

Mrs. Benka is preparing to read a profound "saying for the day"...

Honors

Valedictorian, salutarian, senior honors, D.A.R. award, Ziegler and faculty scholarship give recognition to the academic accomplishments of the students who are often overlooked while the spotlight is on extracurricular activities. But when the senior year brings the high school days to a close, the spotlight is rightfully on the most permanent of all achievements, those which are measurable by college boards, ACT, and National Merit tests.

Mary Casely, valedictorian, with a 94.14 average for four years and Bonnie Steindorf, salutarian, with a 93.87 average, and winner of the D.A.R. good citizenship award are proof of the hard work put into studying. The seventeen seniors, including Susie Gehl and Betty Kling who were not pictured, had a better than 90 average. Leading up to the finale, Key and Spade awards and Badger Girl and Boy are given during the junior year. When this senior class graduates the school will have quite seriously depleted its treasury of intelligence. It is the hope of those who stay behind that the places of these honored individuals will be quickly filled so that their particular attributes of leadership and scholastic excellence will not become only memories.

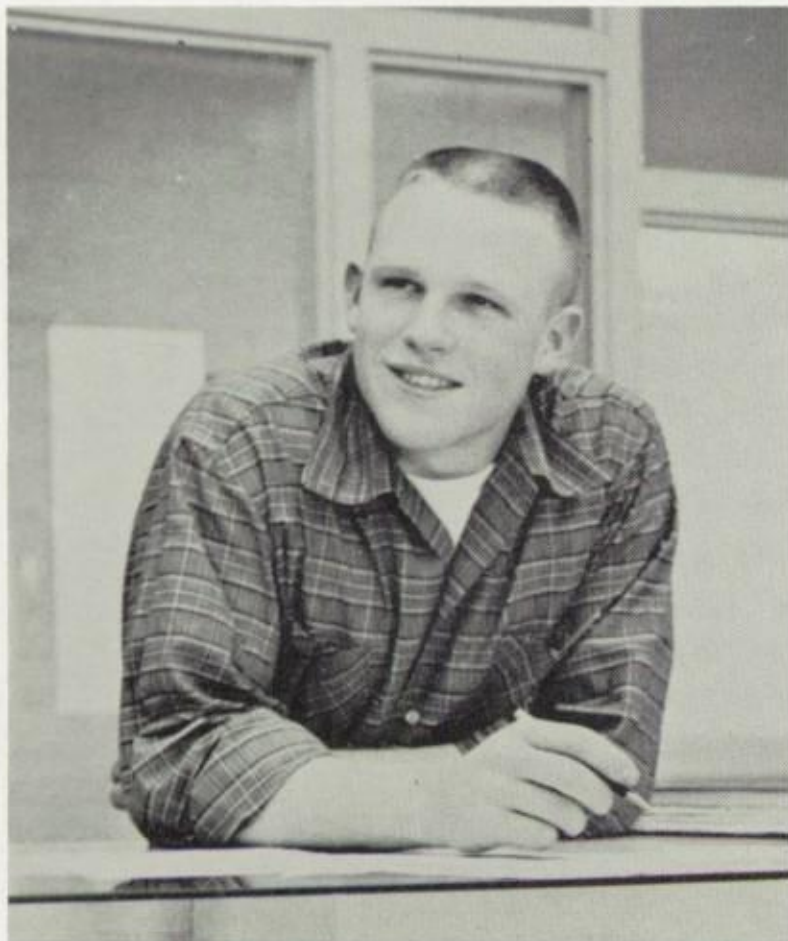

Valedictorian Mary Casely and Salutarian Bonnie Steindorf know that you have to work you fingers to the bone...

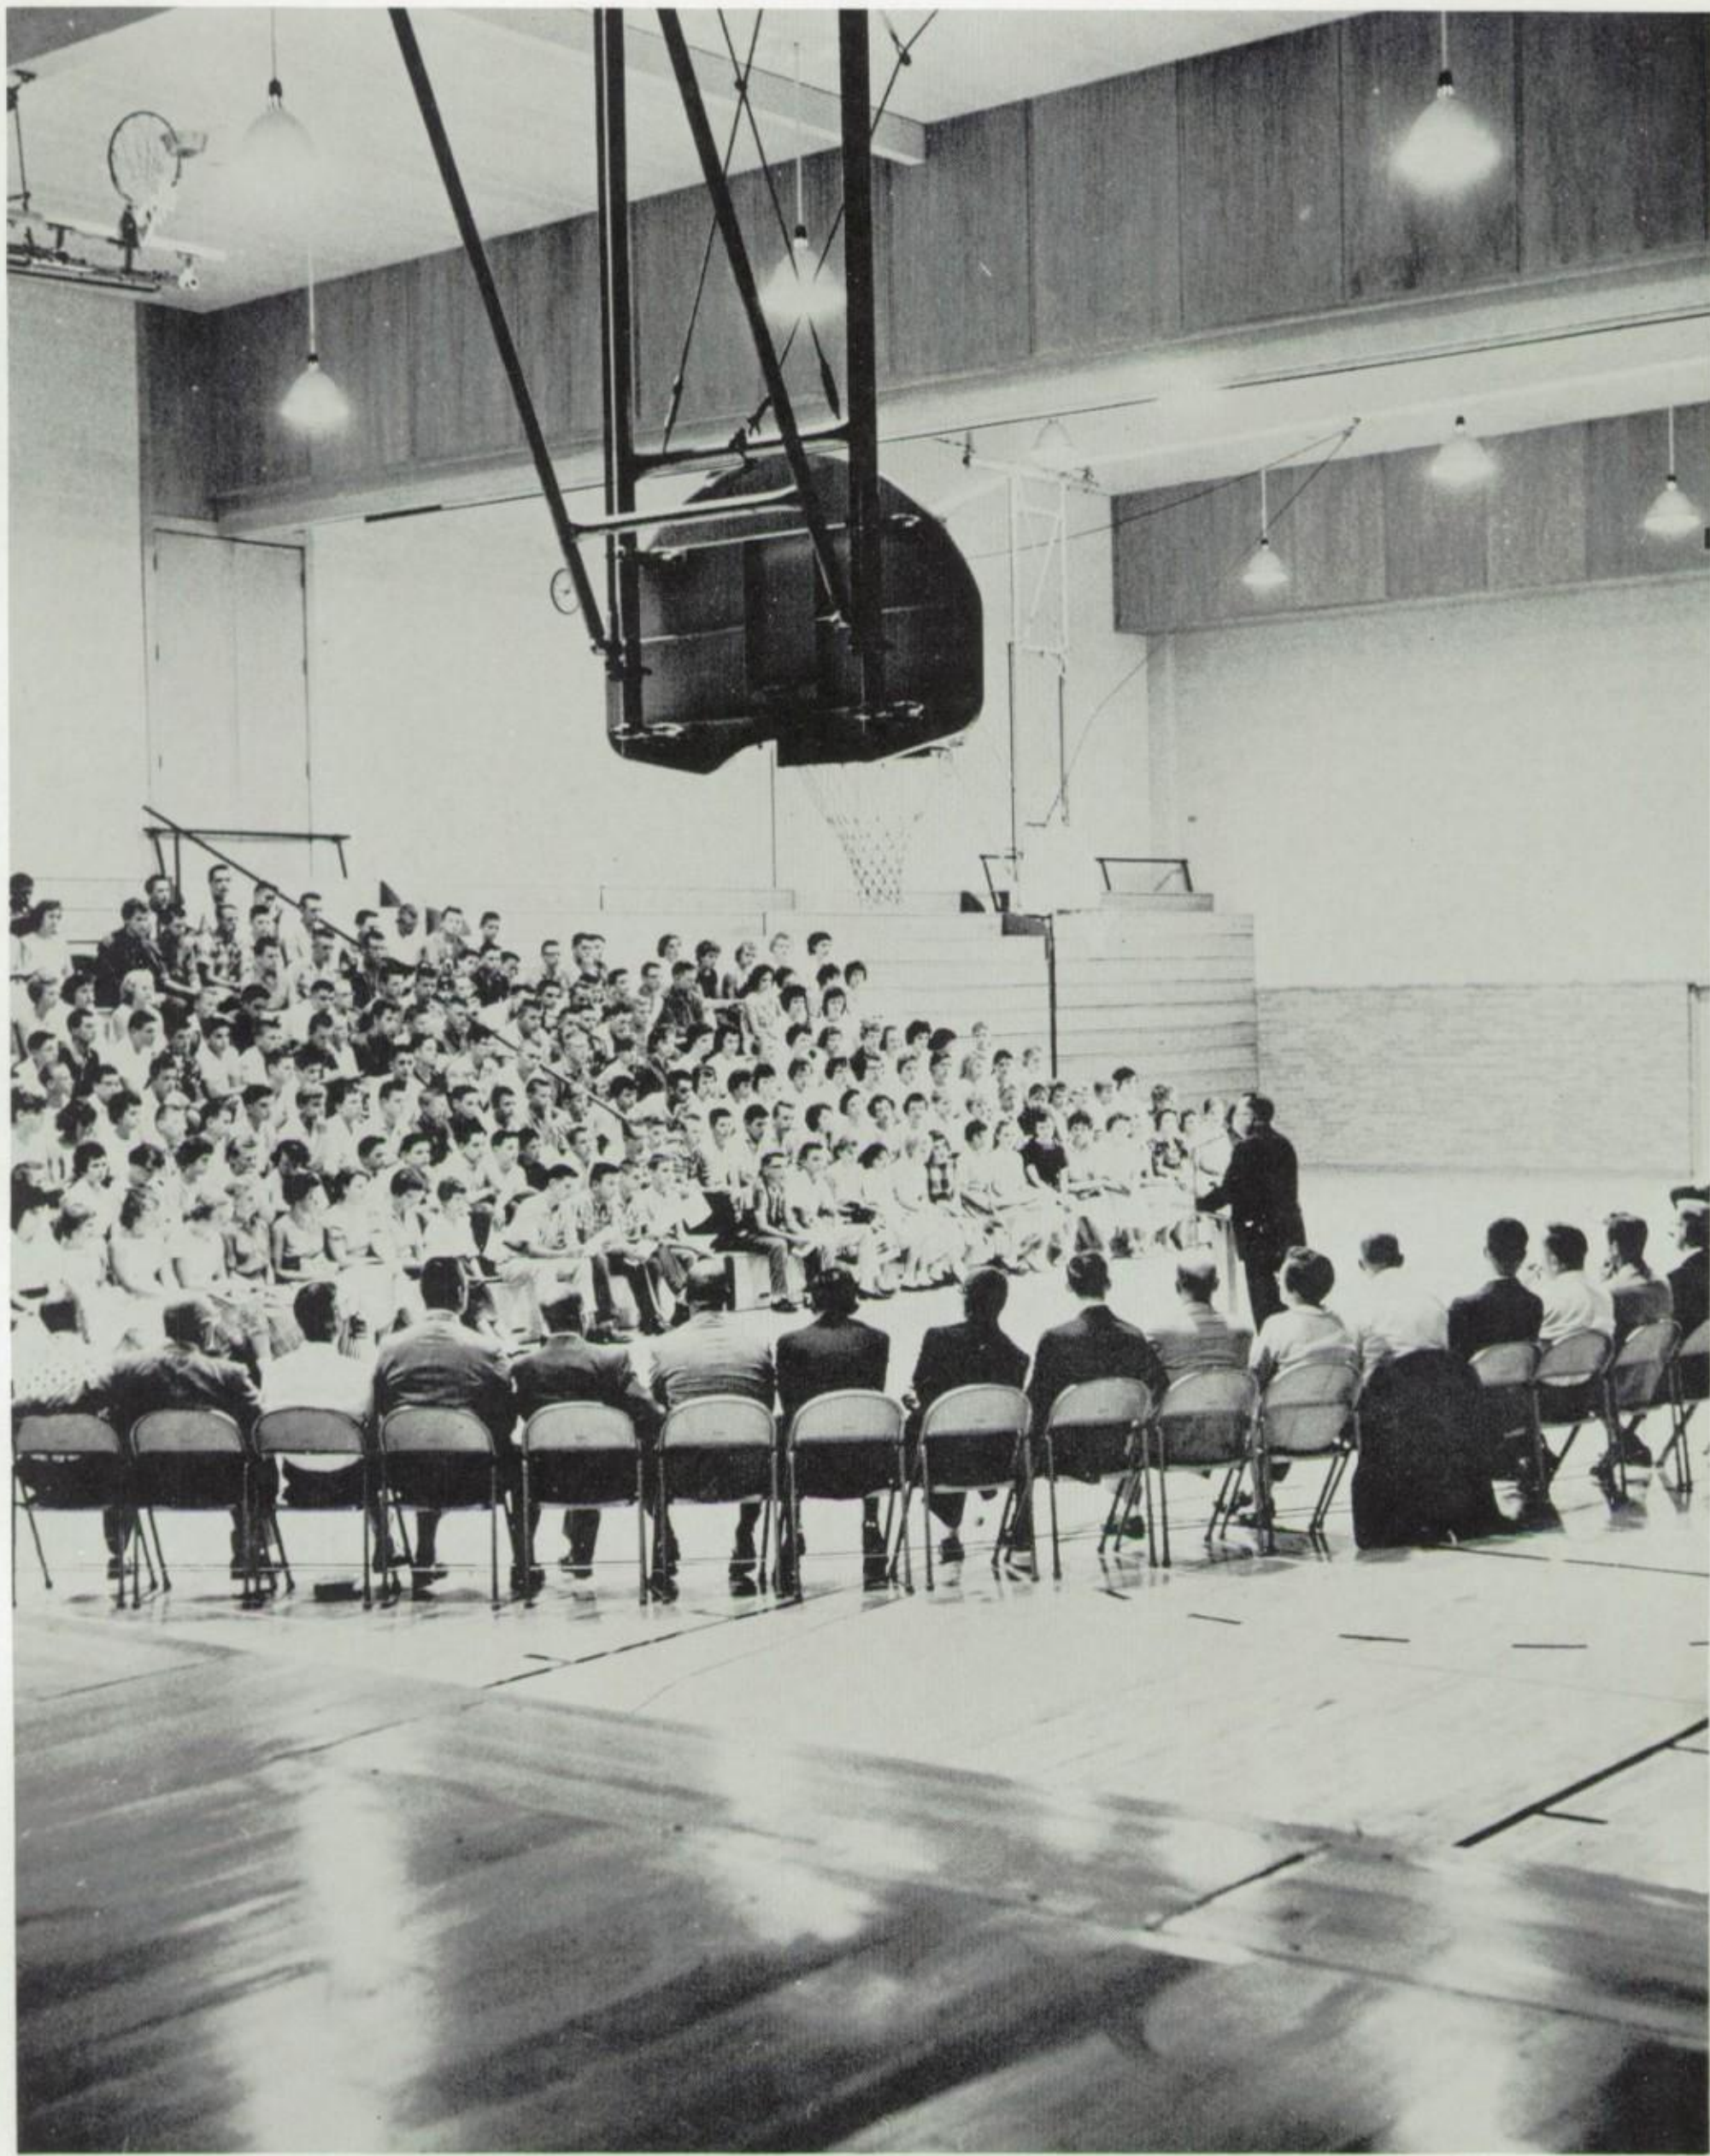

Senior honor students...BOTTOM ROW: B. Becker, S. Wiedmeyer, J. Courtney, J. Frings, M. Weber, B. Steindorf, J. Cerutti, TOP ROW: J. Altmann, O. Kraft, M. Casely, M. Epprecht, D. Dobberpuhl, D. Indermuehle, T. Luckiesh, A. Christenson

Seated in the old library are the 1959-'60 Badger State candidates, Mary Casely, Alfred Christenson, Dave Schulteis, Oscar Kraft, and Jim Altmann...

Key and Spade were won by Oscar Kraft and Mary Casely in their junior year. Oscar's award came to him as a result of his participation in activities, and especially because of his leadership in agricultural ventures. Mary's junior award served to prophesy her continuing academic achievement.

HOMEcoming.....AND GOING

Glance over that title again. It should make sense the second time. The team and alumni were "coming" home, but students were "going" to work. Homecoming involved much work, both in preparation and presentation. Yet, no one tired of this work and the end of the day found us awaiting next year's Homecoming.

Ideas for this day were formed early in the year. The date was set; work was started; and individual plans were made far in advance.

Of course, the climax to weeks of preparation was the day of Homecoming. Last minute touches were added to floats. The parade was presented on time, though a few floats were held together by hand.

After seeing floats and window displays, everyone prepared for the evening. The game and dance followed in quick succession. Girls faced drastic decisions. Should they leave their hair in pin curls during the game? Should they change at Susie's house? Some fellows were equally dismayed. What time should they be there? When did he say my suit would be ready?

These all-important decisions were made and everyone arrived at the game. Even the sad news of a loss couldn't alter the excitement of this night.

The dance, beginning shortly after the game, was one of those occasions remembered as part of the "good old days." It was a wonderful dance, perfect in every detail. Yet, that statement is not entirely true. It did have one flaw--it ended.

First Friday Report

Date: Oct. 15, '60

It had been reported that in a garage at 77 South Cedar Street meetings of a dubious nature were being held by high school students.

We arrived at the scene. We advanced to the door. We knocked--no answer. From inside came strange noises. We entered. No one noticed us. We were amazed at what we saw.

There were seven of them, rushing madly, taping, stuffing, gluing, or throwing crepe paper at what looked to us like a modified hay wagon.

We stood there, too stunned to move. We noticed the high school newspaper on the floor. It read, "Homecoming parade begins at 1:30---All entries---." The "thing" was for Homecoming! We left the garage, satisfied that nothing serious would come of the matter.

Second Friday Report

Date: Homecoming

Our orders were to cover the Homecoming parade by motor escort. There was a mass movement into the downtown area. We arrived at the high school. We left with the parade.

The crowd cheered loudly as it sighted the band. After the band came the floats. Having a mind comparable to that of Watson's, I concluded that these lovely works of art (floats) were the products of the work of the people in the garages. The Homecoming parade climaxed with the Hartford High School Homecoming queen and her court.

We agreed that there had been many preparations, a spirited crowd, and a fine parade for the Hartford Homecoming.

Donna Wagner didn't get that key to the game on time...

Cheerleading

The "A" team cheerleaders started their season with the opening of school. They continued from then on, practicing in the common's area, serving milk and doughnuts to the basketball players after the games, and checking coats before the games. All of these activities were carried out smoothly under the supervision of their advisor, Miss Roob. During the football and basketball seasons the cheerleaders helped the coaches honor the parents of the "A" team players. Later on in the season both the cheering squads attended the Little Ten Cheerleaders clinic at West Bend, where new cheers, routines, and school spirit ideas were given.

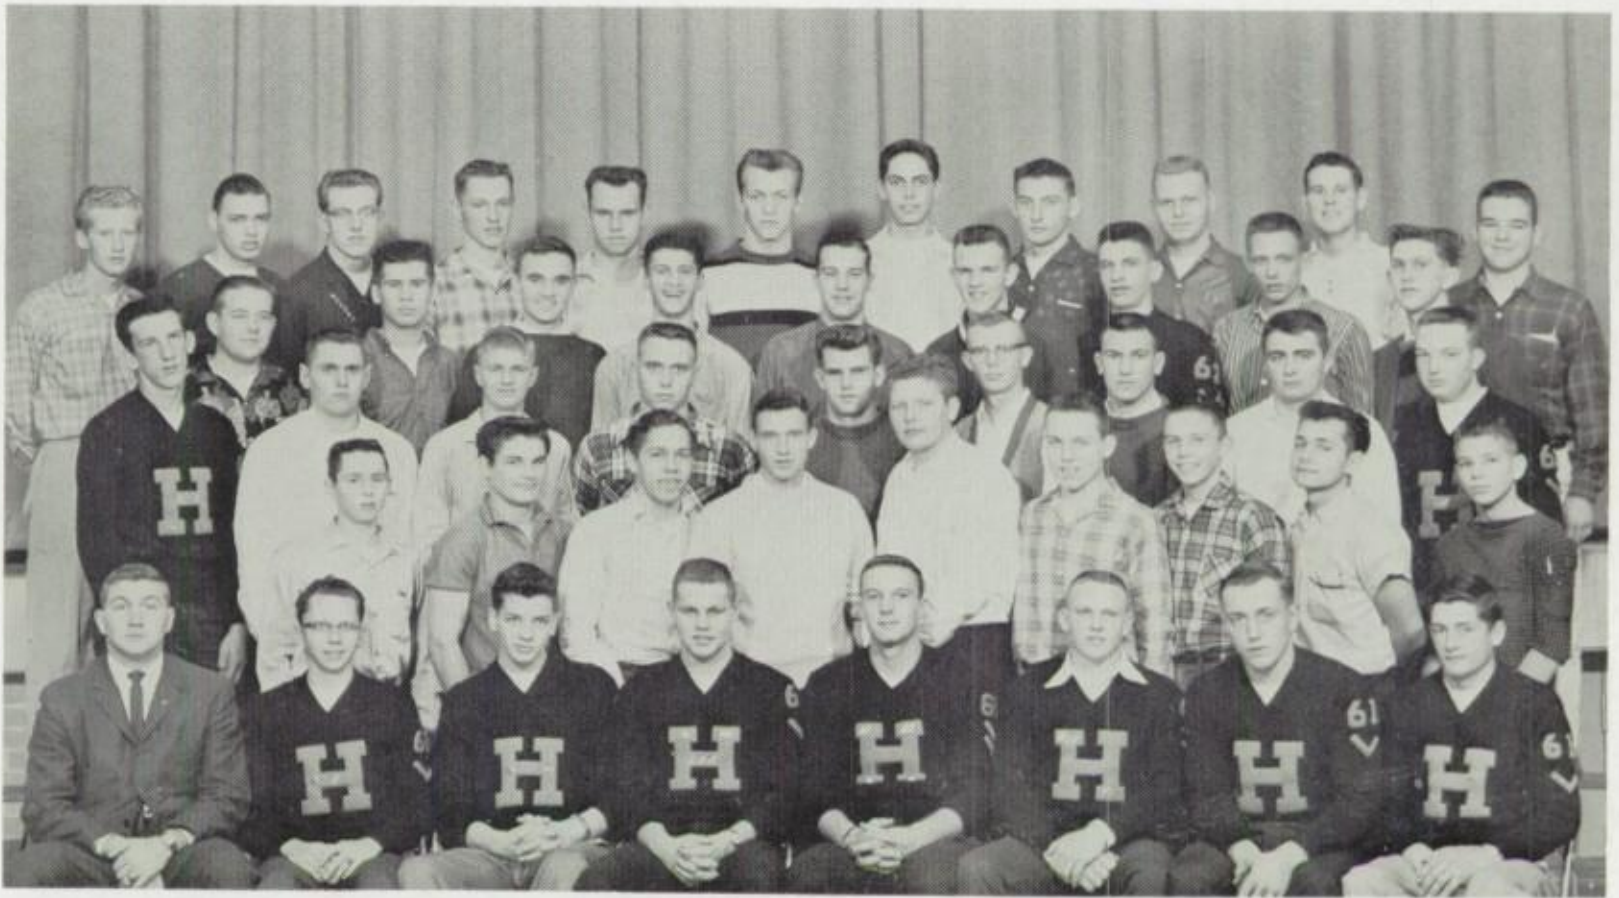

The cheerleading banquet was on May 3rd. A coach from Marquette University, the guest speaker, gave the girls some of his opinions on the players' relationship with the cheerleaders, and what coaches think of cheerleaders. A skit was also part of the program. The Lettermen acted as waiters for the girls.

A new high was reached in musical entertainment with the presentation of the massed band concert on December 3. Bands from Watertown, Horicon, Mayville and Hartford were represented. Some of the numbers presented were: "Amparito Roca," "Carnival of Melody," "Christmas Festival," "Themes from Offenbach," "Kom Susser Todd," "Joshua," and "United States Steel Suite." In addition "Autumn Leaves" and "Hail Nero" were performed by the woodwind choir and brass choir respectively.

The Saturday evening concert ended an all day music clinic in which some 325 students participated. Thirteen outstanding musicians in different fields were invited to help the students with individual problems. Many students gained valuable experience from the clinic and concert.

The band, an integral part of any school, operates for the benefit of the school and the band members. Members of the band have for many years represented this school in the finest tradition at parades, tournaments, concerts, and various civic affairs.

In addition to the services they perform, band members are given the opportunity to hear various bands, both amateur and professional, and also to gain a great deal of information pertaining to music through field trips.

Student Council

STUDENT COUNCIL

The Student Council, our school governing body, acts as a co-ordinating organization for the student and the administration. It consists of representatives from the classes and the organizations. This year the following officers were elected: President-David Schulteis, Vice-President-Robert O'Keane, Secretary-Janet Boyd, and Treasurer-Sandra Esslinger. With the advisorship of Miss Phyllis Fish and Mr. Gene Cartwright, the best in school citizenship and student leadership was encouraged so that we might enrich our school life.

The Council has been responsible for several worthwhile activities. It has served to familiarize the incoming freshmen with what might be otherwise a frightening experience by conducting a "get-acquainted" dance. It has directed successful Homecoming and Christmas programs. By way of practicing the goodwill which is part of the yuletide season, it has sponsored a Christmas fund, and most recently it has sought to introduce a foreign-exchange student program.

Chorus

Miss Knoll suggests a "B" natural for the chorus...

"All moods common to human nature may be awakened by the voice." Many moods have been awakened by the voices of our interesting choral department under the enthusiastic direction of Miss Knoll.

The chorus room is accoustically improved, containing three practice rooms, a music library and a robe storage closet. This year a Steinway grand piano was purchased along with two practice pianos.

This year the choruses presented their annual Christmas concert. "Prelude to Christmas" was the main theme and it was presented in tableau form. In March, an assembly program was given to the student body.

Officers of the Freshman Chorus are: President, Elizabeth Schulteis; Vice-President, Joyce Krahn; Secretary-Treasurer, Marcy Brummond.

President of the Advanced Girls' Chorus is Jean Kroeten; Vice-President, Sharon Konrath; Secretary, Mary Ann Doll; Treasurer, Florence Gehl.

Michael Carr is the President of the Mixed Chorus; Carol Kurth is the Vice-President; Gwen Larson is Secretary; and Susie Mittlestadt is the Treasurer. Business Manager is Barbara Hiller; Robe Mistress is Mary Dietenberger; Librarians are Kathy Murphy, Allen Schulz, Mary Lynn Dummer, and David Dobberpuhl. Debate

C. Schaumberg, J. Courtney, S. Reed, M. Casely, R. Sell..."A" team debaters...

Ron, Cheryl, and Steve received debate awards for the most points earned in their divisions...

The accomplishments of the '60-'61 debate season can be looked upon with satisfaction. The varsity team captured the Little Ten crown, and three individual speaker trophies were won at the Neenah Invitational Tournament. Debating with strong competition from schools with much larger enrollments, the name "Hartford" has continued to be regarded as a strong contender through the efforts of this year's debaters.

The "B" and "C" squads learned the fundamentals of debate and gained much experience for future years. Our new coach, Mr. O'Keefe, contributed ideas for research and new outlooks on the resolution.

Orange and Black Staff

The school newspaper, the "Orange and Black," gives a thorough coverage of all events within our school, keeping us up-to-date on the major activities taking place. Each monthly publication involves much work before it is printed: assigning items, writing assignments, laying out the articles and proofreading. It provides an accurate record of our school days.

The Oriole Staff is faced with the daily task of recording school activities in the form of pictures and keeping abreast of the news which may be of interest to the student body.

A typical day might get some Oriole staff member involved in writing a short article, cutting a picture down to size, dreaming up a few captions, and gluing pictures into place. If that same staff member stays after school, he may find himself copy counting, proofreading, and filling in the index.

If some unknowing student happens to pass the Oriole room, otherwise known as the storage room, he is struck by its unusual size--small. The room seems to be cluttered with paper and pictures with no semblance of order. However, some hidden order does exist. Occasionally it becomes too hidden for the staff members to follow, but it is still there.

Virginia Rode, Suzie Reichert, Jerry Rohleder, and Gary Baerman in a scene from the One-Act Play...

"The Egg and I" laid 'em in the aisles. The MacDonald brood scrambled about for two acts trying to force higher production from their reluctant hens. Between getting up with the chickens and going to bed at the drop of the sun the female MacDonald decided to return to the cackle-less city and breathe that foul, rather than fowl, air. Visits by various well-meaning but nevertheless strange country characters did not make the little rural nest any more comfortable. But as these plays continue to prove, it's always darkest just before the dawn; and if you can't have a goose that lays golden eggs, you might settle for a chicken that just lays the edible kind.

Hartford High schoolers and their families were treated to this egg roll on February 13th and 14th. The first and second nighter audiences had cause to be thankful that they did attend.

Joe Wild portrays the part of Fishface in "The Egg and I"...

"The Flattering Word," a one-act play produced in the early part of the year, was centered around the theme of how flattery will change a person's opinion if that opinion was formed only through envy. The theme was depicted by a minister who outwardly disliked actors until he was flattered by one. The play, given under the direction of Mr. Buchholtz won a "B" at the Columbus one-act play contest.

Students of Latin and Spanish occasionally put aside their books and cease their translating to have some fun. As the year progressed Latin and Spanish Club members again enjoyed a variety of activities.

Autumn saw the Latin Club busily constructing a float for the Homecoming parade and then taking time out to enjoy a fall picnic. The club's winter activities included a trip to Milwaukee to see the movie "Ben Hur" and Christmas caroling (in Latin, of course!). Under the direction of Mr. O'Keefe, the club ended the year with a Latin banquet.

The Spanish Club and their advisor, Miss Patti, started the year with an initiation party. For Homecoming the club again decorated a store-window downtown. Writing to Spanish pen pals kept members busy throughout the year. The annual picnic in spring concluded the year's activities.

Petra pours impotent punch for important people...

Its operation centered in the deep southern part of our building, the library club and Miss Buckley, its mentor, are responsible for many worthwhile activities. The eighteen members of this club, reflecting the hospitality associated with this sector, cordially file and catalog our literary materials, check our books and magazines in and out, pin up eye-catching bulletin boards, and bring about a pleasant, inviting atmosphere.

The newness of this manse of books places additional duties on the library club. Every home has to be arranged for the convenience of its visitors, as is the library.

Certain officers are appointed to insure courteous service, to preside over the monthly meetings, and to organize committees to promote book week, the Mardi Gras of library circles. This year President Sandy Esslinger, Vice-President Susie Gehl, and Secretary-Treasurer Kay Nicholson helped to present the traditional library tea at which teachers were given a chance to acquaint themselves with the library, student librarians, and good food.

Courtesy, kindness, and consideration are the watch words of our southern-exposed library.

The 1960-61 football season was one of misfortune rather than fortune. Mayville was the first of many tough opponents which Hartford was to meet. Hartford lost that game, but, as the defeated boys slowly walked back to the new high school, they were already planning how they might "get" their next foe. They trained and trained; tension rose higher and higher. They felt sure of victory and moved confidently on to the Hartford field.

In what seemed a matter of minutes the second game was over. Was it possible that these crushed boys were the same hardy young lions that had started the game? Again, the boys headed for a hot shower and more plans for "next time."

It was a long season for Hartford---exactly seven defeats and one victory long. It wasn't a season for setting records or for spectacular victories. However, as long as football is played, someone must lose and it can't always be "the other guy."

Football teaches a needed lesson in preparing the boys for the hard knocks of life. It teaches will-power and discipline, and, after all, there is always next year and the year after that.

Cross

Cross country, a long distance running sport, causes an athlete to maintain peak physical condition. Team work is required as well as individual ability. This ability is the use of stamina and speed. The stamina is needed to maintain the runner for the 2.2 mile course. While the speed is used when the runner needs that little extra.

As for the Hartford team, Mr. Mahr was pleased with the showing of his young team. The team's eighth place showing in the state meet was a surprise to everyone. A still more promising sign was that five of the seven varsity members were sophomores or juniors. With this fine young team, Mr. Mahr has set high goals for the years to come.

Wrestling

Eddie Albert heads for another victory...

During the long winter months when you entered the gymnasium, we are sure that all of you were aware of the activity on the basketball court, but how many of you noticed what was happening upon the stage behind the curtain? This was the area in which the wrestlers operated. Although forced to practice in cramped quarters, the wrestlers still got in their daily workouts. These began with a series of calisthenics which ordinarily included forty pushups, seventy-five sit-ups, one hundred straddle hops, and many other exercises. They were in turn, followed by one and one-half hours of wrestling in which the individual put to use the basic maneuvers which he had been taught. By wrestling with someone of his weight-class, one individual was pitted against another of the same size and weight. The one who put the most into it was the one who won.

With five lettermen graduating: Dave Schulteis, Ed Albert, Jim Rohleder, Don Thiede, and Jerry Purtell; Mr. Colman and Mr. Stracka, and Mr. Moren will have a nucleus of eight returning matmen to work with. The four freshmen who have earned letters Gordon Purtell, Gerry Wenninger, Marv Ketelhut and Allan Brace, looked very good in practice and should help the team a great deal next year.

Although Schulteis and Albert will be gone, the team next year should be one of the strongest Hartford has ever had.

This isn't the army, but hurry up and wait...

Basketball

The 1960-61 varsity basketball team had a not quite spectacular season. Although the team consisted of seven seniors and was backed by a substantial bench, it never quite got rolling. We might excuse ourselves by rating the strength of our conference, the close scores of many of our games, and the usual bad breaks; but nevertheless history records only the cold statistics of many losses and not many wins.

In many ways the student wins though the individual game may be lost. Each student had an opportunity to view a good, clean, hard-fought battle on any number of winter evenings.

Some of the best competition sports-wise in our school takes place after 4:00 P.M. in the gym on Friday nights and during gym periods all week. Generally these clashes of teams were not viewed by a multitude of fans, nor were the individual players cheered by a bevy of cheerleaders, but nevertheless these were important to the individual who first "suited up" and after "sweated out" a close decision. Intramural and Phys. Ed. athletes learned the same lesson as the regular varsity competitors--that a thing worth doing is worth doing well.

Track

At the end of the winter months basketballers and wrestlers are reminded to turn in all their equipment. The warm weather encourages a new set of coaches and prospective team members to go outdoors. A new type of uniform, consisting of a loose, gray, hooded sweat-shirt, a pair of gray pants, and shoes with ominous-looking spikes, appears on campus. The scene is set for the track season.

During most of the spring the track boys are seen practicing on the cinder track surrounding the football field. Scheduled practices during the seventh period and after school constitute only a portion of the actual effort put forth by these boys. Training must be maintained twenty-four hours a day. Saturday afternoons and several evenings during the week are used for work-outs.

Rainy weather never stops the track boys. Indoor practice and indoor meets are substituted to make the season worthwhile.

At the end of the year the track boys are rewarded for the hard work they have done. Hartford usually has its share of trophies for the team as a whole and also a large number of individual awards in the form of letters and pins.

Baseball

Kieth, Sylvan, David, Bob and Harry are all set to start practice...

About March 20th the gym shifts from a basketball court to a baseball field. Most of the time is then spent conditioning the body for the baseball season. The rest of the time is spent getting the arm in shape after a six-month lay-off.

As soon as the weather warms up and the field can be played on, the team starts using the outdoor baseball field. Now the team is usually divided into three groups: infielders, outfielders, and pitchers and catchers. These groups usually warm up together and practice several plays that might come up during a game. Infielders include "Red" Weber, Keith Stucke, Bob Hanrahan, Harry Klink, and Tom Feiter. The outfield is composed of "Cuddles" Weber, Art Rode, and Mickey Lehman. Pitchers and catchers include Gary Schlieve, Bill Rudersdorf, and John Gennerman.

The rest of the pre-season period is spent on batting practice. Everybody goes into the batting cage and sharpens his batting eye. The batters are coached by Mr. Giebel who suggests ways the boys might improve their batting average. A great deal of time is spent on batting practice and it usually pays off during the season.

Golf

"Keep your head down, eye on the ball, and loosen up," were familiar expressions that the '61 golf team heard this season. Mr. Allen coached the varsity team. He taught the varsity members to stand correctly, to grip the club correctly, and most important of all, to swing with coordination. Mr. Benka was in charge of the junior varsity and the freshman team. He had the difficult task of preparing the boys of both teams for varsity standing.

Last year several of the boys were plagued with hooks and slices. This year Mr. Allen found that this problem was lessened.

The season was started with the purchase of two driving ranges this year. These resembled fish nets, but they enabled the golfers to learn directions. These ranges were stationed on the stage. When the weather permitted, the golf team hiked to the golf course. There the team found several facilities available for its use. There was a three-hole practice course, a putting green, and a regular nine-hole course. It is said that the greens are the best in the state. Hooks and slices were gradually corrected on the practice course.

The varsity and junior varsity teams each had six players while the freshman team had nine. As for competition this year, the varsity had twelve meets, the junior varsity had eight meets, and the freshmen had two. This schedule provided the golf teams with a great deal of experience for next year.

There is a great need for competent mathematicians in this scientific world. Our math department gives the students the essentials of math, and prepares the student for the practical applications of math. And, it also gives him the opportunity to qualify for advanced training. Math is extremely valuable for it trains the mind to think logically and this logical thinking is applicable to other fields.

Mr. Grandine doesn't seem to agree with Ginny Grover's definition of a "square"...

Mr. Halverson, Mr. Grandine, Mr. Hoffman, Mr. Lorenzon, and Mr. Kalaher are shown "solving for X"...

Miss Fish found something extremely fascinating which she is pointing out to Mr. Nicholson, Mr. Andereck, Mr. Kalaher, Miss Washburne, and Mr. Robins...

Read! Steve Reed...

The Science Department, due to the emphasis placed upon science in the last few years, has been recognized for its true worth. Other courses make us aware of ideas and concepts, but science does something in addition. It makes us aware of our physical surroundings. It reveals to us the world of plants, animals, chemicals, and the phenomena of physics.

Mr. Stracka, Mr. Moren, Mr. Breen, Miss Keller, and Mr. Giebel discuss the social studies curriculum...

It is essential that every American reaches a basic understanding of the history and also of the present day policies of our country. Our democracy demands that every individual has a training that gives him the ability to make wise, unprejudiced decisions. The social studies courses, social problems, citizenship, geography, U.S. history, world history, and recent American history, all complement each other in developing this ideal citizenship.

Jean Schwalbe, Pam Becker, and Jerry Hanrahan take advantage of the conference room to prepare a world history report...

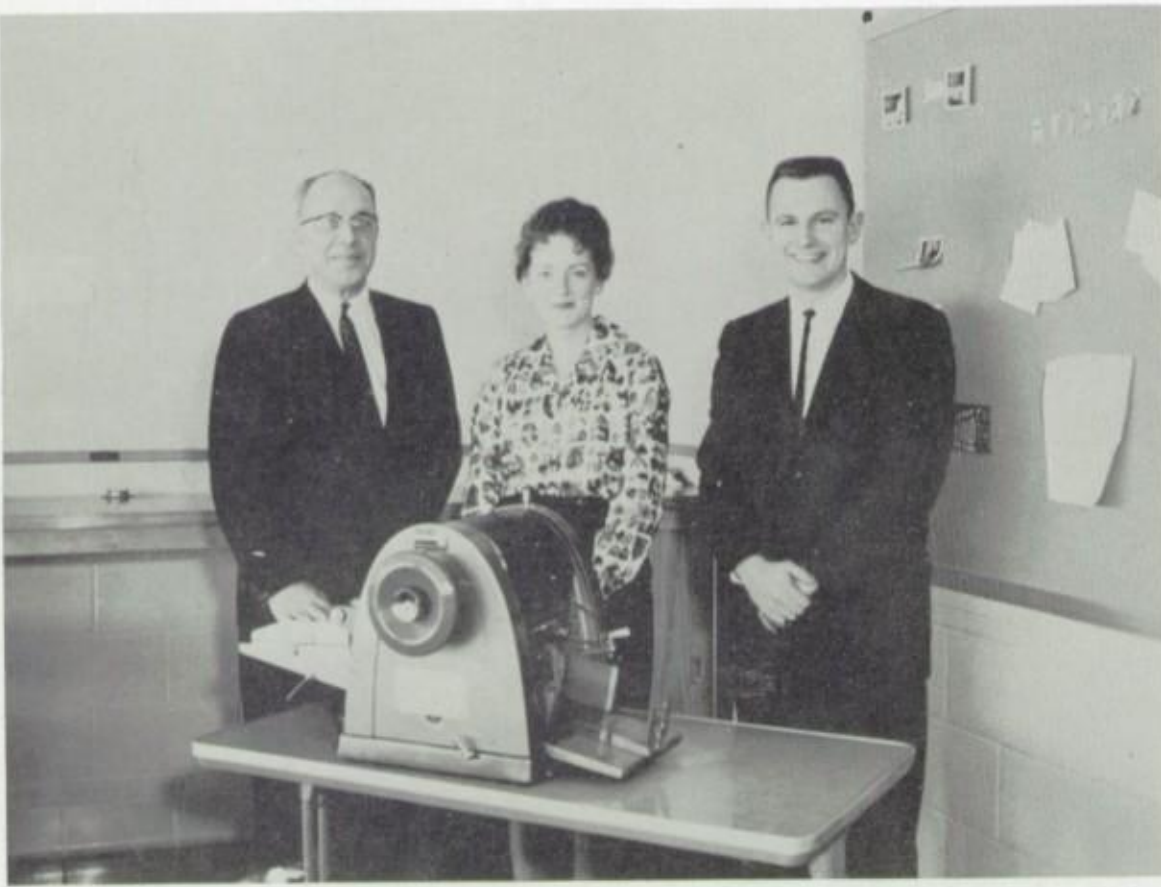

Mr. Dunk, Mr. Coleman, Mr. Bucholz, Miss Patti, Miss Roob, and Mr. Benka in conference concerning problems of the Language Arts Department...

The Language Arts Department, including the English and foreign language sections, enables students to gain usable knowledge of the grammar and literature of our native language and of Latin and Spanish. A third section of this department, the library, provides research and general background material for the Language Arts Department as well as for all of the other departments.

Mr. O'Keefe explains Caesar's strategy to Ron Sell...

Mr. Allen, Miss Keepers, and Mr. Underwood clustered around the duplicating machine are unduplicatable...

The Business Education Department offers excellent training for students who wish to go into business. The teachers of "Bus. Ed." represent many years of business know-how, many credits of graduate study, and many ideas on what is appropriate to the course. More students are becoming aware of the value of business training suggested in the career files of the library.

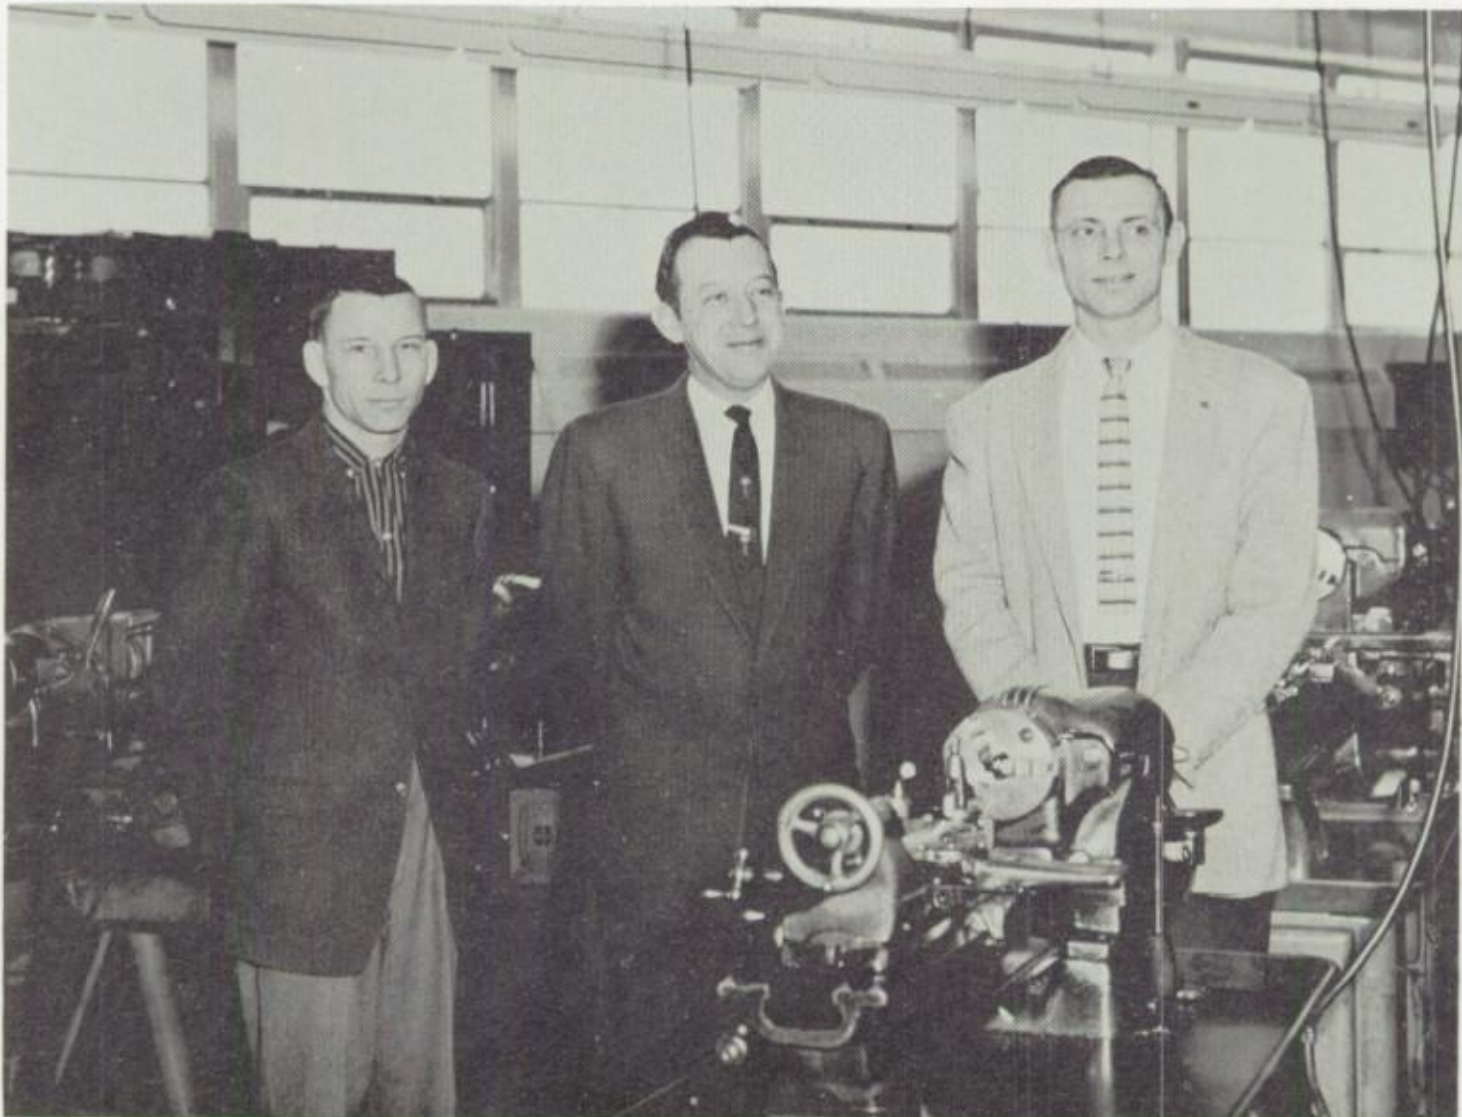

Faster, Miss Keepers, A;SLDKFJGH...

A large percentage of boys enrolled in high school are learning trades in the vocational wing of H.H.S. Here under the guidance and direction of Mr. Mahr and Mr. Rublee, future carpenters and draftmen take up the pencils, hammers, and tools which they will wield in their vocations.

Future welders, machinists, and auto mechanics are learning their trades from Mr. Spahn, Mr. Schell and Mr. Rublee.

Mr. Rublee and Mr. Mahr discuss woodworking plans... revising the house that Jack built...

Smiling faces indicate that this year Mr. Rublee, Mr. Schell, and Mr. Spahn find teaching a pleasure...

Every Hartford High School student is required to take physical education for four years. During these years he learns to take care of his body, to apply the principles of first aid, to obtain a working familiarity with a number of recreational sports, and to dress rapidly after a "refreshing" shower.

Miss Weinand and Coach Beatty compare the results of the volleyball season...

The choruses and band present an opportunity for students to acquaint themselves with classical and modern music. Music appreciation allows students to delve into the fundamentals of music. Frequently a band student must rely on the library to provide him with information on some composer or on the origination of some rhythm. Several students look for information on their particular instrument. Whatever the reason, students realize the advantage of musical knowledge through books.

Miss Knoll playing a new arrangement receives the approval of Mr. Schneider and Mr. Howard...

Mr. Nicholson and Jim Dukelow test and record butter fat content...

In a rural community like Hartford, the responsibility to educate the farm youth in the ways of agriculture is one of extreme importance. Mr. Nicholson gives counseling to any one who has a particular farming problem. Along with his classroom schedule he keeps the farmers informed on the latest trends in agriculture through his weekly radio program and his weekly newspaper column.

Students pause enroute to classes to view the clothing as well as other displays for which the Home Ec. department is famous. The department prepares high school girls for the future duties of caring for a family and managing a household. One of the department's most valuable aids is the library. Here, "Home Ec." students may gain much practical knowledge from the many books available.

Miss Axtel and Miss Washburne look at a new pattern book...

Mr. Dobbe, a recent addition to our faculty, examines his lesson plans...

Every school which wants to pride itself in its scholastic achievements will do its best to provide education for the exceptional children whether they have many talents or few. With the opening of the new school the special education department, partially supported by grants, was created. Mr. Dobbe, the instructor, is the first teacher in this field at Hartford High and the help he has given to these students is fully appreciated.

Mrs. Hauser is kept busy supplying clean towels for the Phy. Ed. department...

Cooks

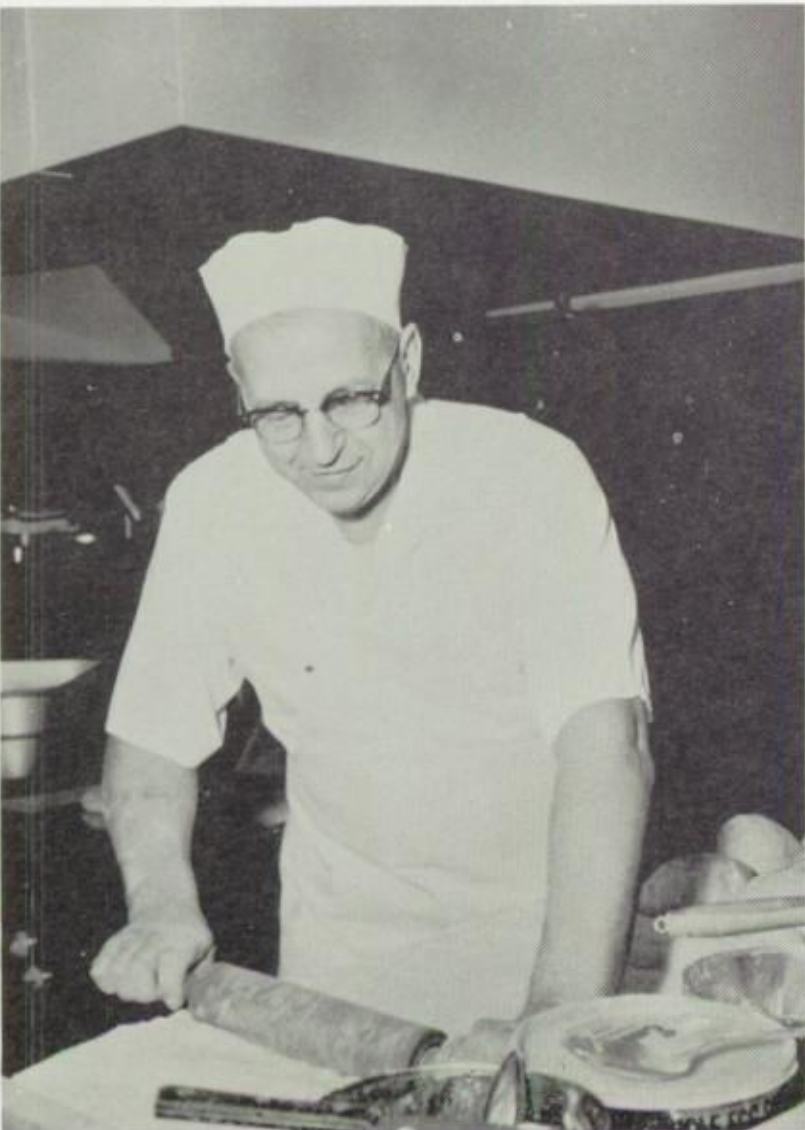

The cooks, Mrs. Travis, Mrs. Butzler, Mrs. Ziorgan, and Mrs. Jeffords seem ready to serve lunch...

The four cooks work together every morning preparing and serving meals. Their task is not easy for each menu must be planned around government commodities and must be properly balanced. Using the modern facilities of our new school has eased their work, but ideas for new meals, hours of careful cooking, and courteous service are still required and received.

Their male counterpart, Mr. Hiller, who is usually up to his elbows in pastry dough, is responsible for the delicious desserts that have endangered all of our diets. Mr. Hiller also helps the other custodians maintain the cleanliness throughout the building.

Mr. Hiller is fixing some scrumptious dessert again...

Maintenance

Every building must be maintained, and a school building is certainly no exception. If the students are to have the best facilities in which to acquire their education, the school building must be kept in excellent condition. This task falls on the broad and capable shoulders of the men pictured on this page.

Howard Black warms our hearts--and our bodies...

Lester Scherger fills up his "mobile"...

George Young tidies up another area of the school...
